“Giving up the old house was never an option for us. We’ve got too many memories there, and the location is unparalleled. A gigantic garden right next to a forest is hard to beat, and these factors all played a role in our decision to place a new build next to our original house. It was important to us to include an element that tied the two buildings together. And what better than a wintergarden?”

THE MENSEN FAMILY

A modern, two-story white house is shown at dusk. The house features a large, glass-enclosed winter garden on the ground floor, which is illuminated from within. Inside the winter garden, there is a white sofa, a coffee table, and a large potted plant. The upper floor has a balcony with a glass railing. The house is set on a grassy hill, and a city skyline is visible in the background under a twilight sky. The text "BREATHTAKING BEAUTY" is written in a bold, sans-serif font in the upper right corner, and "Wintergarden" is written in a smaller, italicized font below it.

“People kept telling us we should turn our wintergarden into a bright, open study. But I always said the same thing to them: it’s a place to live, not a place to work. And that’s maybe the best thing about this space in our home.”

“Whatever time of year we’re enjoying our home, every season has its own special charm. In spring and summer, when the garden is lush and green, all the glass gives us beautiful views from inside. But the wintergarden’s also our favourite place to nestle in for the winter. We love it when the sun shines through the glass roof, warming up our home. This is how we’ve always dreamed of living.”
